Our Challenge

Dear friends:

Taking the gospel to the Gentiles, as reflected in the Acts of the Apostles, was a radical bursting of old wineskins. Many aspects of ancient Judaism were taken over into early Christianity. But even the old became new under the impact of the sacrificial and inclusive love revealed in the life and teachings of Jesus. In exile on the Isle of Patmos, John was granted a sweeping vision of salvation history. He recorded it in what we know as Revelation. The heart of the vision was the promised transformation of all things. The former world will pass away, and a new world will be born. On the eve of his death, Jesus gathered his disciples to celebrate Passover. It was a time to focus on only the most important things. He brought something new out of an old commandment. "Love one another, as I have loved you." Nothing matters more than self-giving, sacrificing love. The world of manufacturing and merchandising knows the power of the words, "retro," "vintage," and "classic." They feed our thirst for new things by reissuing the old under the label of the new. We place high value on the new in education and production. Curiously, we hold fast to the old in the area of politics and religion. The wisdom of the ages has been distilled in adages that have been worn as smooth as river stones through familiarity and neglect. Paradox and reversal are woven into the fabric of all things. New things are lost, and lost things are found. Darkness takes the light, and the light shines in the darkness. The strong become weak, and the weak become strong. Evil is found within the model citizen, and goodness is found in the criminal heart. In such a world we must beware and take care, but in such a world grace and love are ever-present.

Have a good week!

Love and prayers,
Father Randy

WORD OF LIFE

"Everyone is in need of reassurance, and if we, who have touched 'the Word of life' (1 Jn 1:1) do not give it, who will? How beautiful it is to be Christians who offer consolation, who bear the burdens of others and who offer encouragement: messengers of life in a time of death!"
